EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION. A magnificent Pen Design, 18x27 inches of the lamented ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S IMMORTAL EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION, executed by WM. A. COLLINS of No. 17 Nassau St., N. Y., having been Photo-Lithographed by the celebrated Osborne Process. Copies are now ready for sale and can be procured by application to the subscribers.

This work, irrespective of its great historic value, is the most superb piece of penmanship ever executed, and in itself is an ornament that should adorn every household. No liberty loving American should be without a copy. None can form an idea of its chasteness of design, beauty of execution and completeness of detail, without examination. It has been pronounced by the most experienced connoisseurs as equal to the finest steel plate engraving; and the fact of its having been executed with an ordinary steel pen and common writing ink is taken into consideration, it ranks as a marvel of patience, perseverance and art. Copies will be sent to any address in the union on receipt of $2.50 each.

This Infallible Remedy does not, like the poisonous irritating snuffs and strong caustic solutions with which the people have long been humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the lungs, as there is danger of doing in the use of such nostrums, but it produces a perfect and permanent cure of the worst cases of chronic Catarrh, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, Loss or Impairment of the sense of taste, smell or hearing, Watering or Weak Eyes, and Impaired Memory, when caused by the violence of Catarrh, as they all frequently are. We offer, in good faith a standing reward of $500 for a case of Catarrh that we cannot cure.

Sold by most Druggists Everywhere.

PRICE ONLY 50 CENTS. Ask your Druggist for the Remedy, but if he has not yet got it on sale don't be put off by accepting any miserable worse than worthless substitute, but enclose sixty cents to me and the Remedy will be sent you post paid. Four packages $2, or one dozen for $5.

Correspondence.

THE MORMON PROB[illegible]

Editor Argus:—I do not [illegible] it strange that a nation just emerging from a civil war, surpassing in magnitude any recorded in history—succeeded by an era of innumerable vexed questions which that war has evoked, should fail to recognize lesser difficulties in its path, no matter how dangerous they may be. It has proved itself capable of subduing a warlike confederacy, supported by consummate military genius and the [illegible] of half a million of brave men, and may well be pardoned for giving [illegible] tion to a single distant territory [illegible] the heart of the continent, whose [illegible] tive military force, under the [illegible] vorable circumstances, could not be [illegible] pared as a unit to the armies [illegible] fought, defeated, and now [illegible] pentance. Yet the time is at [illegible] the vital problem must be [illegible] the Federal Government, and [illegible] diplomacy, or its Gordian knot [illegible] with the sword. It can no[illegible] nored or avoided, for a principle [illegible] as it is imperative, has never before ap[illegible] peared in the political or moral arena [illegible] this country, and which now must be finally and forever settled.

The great international lines of railway now completed across the plains from the Atlantic and from the Pacific coasts, converge in the valley of Salt Lake and meet at the Mormon King's Capitol. The modern christianity and civilization that have for many years been dragged by weary trains of emigrants over endless prairies and barren wastes of sand to the capitol of Brigham Young, tarried a day or two, then passed on to the golden glories of the new Eldorado, are now hurried into the midst of this peculiar people on the wings of steam.

The locomotive is an apt missionary of the age in which we live—a missionary more irresistible in its influences, more potent in its teachings than all the eloquence of a Francis Xavier, and the devotion of a Judson. Men need not listen to the voice of the living preacher, nor heed the silent teachings of his example, but to resist the sermons of that fierce being, whose lungs of steel George Stephenson first vitalized by the breath of life, is simply an impossibility. It is an apostle of human progress, and is stretching forward to the accomplishment of a good mission, and whether we will or not, the Republic must be drawn into the unequal struggle, and lend her moral as well as her physical resources to the side of the stronger.

Men who have traveled from England, Wales, and the continent of Europe, daring to brave three thousand miles of treacherous sea and as many more over land, to give their peculiar doctrine a "local habitation and a name," in this oasis in the desert, are of no common stuff, and inspired with no common zeal. Their origin is identical with that of the Puritans who landed on Plymouth Rock, and however monstrous the errors of their creed, we should, through common charity, give them credit for sincerity, unrivalled by that of their illustrious predecessors. Unsanctioned by the Government, they have founded a theocracy in Deseret, more stringent than that which once existed in New England, or was enforced by the most exacting Czar of Russia, and the reins of unlimited and irresponsible power have been placed in the hands of a man who is capable of well doing it, and who is intelligent enough to be highly dangerous to those who may oppose him.

Unto this theocracy Brigham Young has with unprecedented skill woven the system of polygamy; and a plurality of wives has perhaps as much to do with the growth of Mormanism as had the hourls of the Mohamedan paradise in spreading the doctrines of the Koran. Joseph Smith, were he to walk the earth again, would fail to recognize Mormanism as it is to-day. Polygamy is the work of Brigham Young; while it stands it will be a living monument to curse him; when it falls it drags him into the fathomless depth of oblivion, and shatters the whole foundation of the faith which he has championed with so much success.

Now that the Pacific Railway binds with iron links Salt Lake City to the rest of the world, the social and theological barriers which have thus far fenced out inquisitive Gentiles from the favorite haunts of these Latter Day Saints must be torn asunder. Utah must be an integral part of the Federal Union in fact as well as in name. Will polygamy be tolerated under the flag of a christian nation? Can we permit a man to place himself as sovereign over a large and constantly increasing community, who by his very office declares himself both the maker and judge of laws? Simply can the Government sanction and extend protection to Mormanism as it exists to-day, and as it must exist if it exists at all? Will the Federal Government fail to act in this important matter? If it does, can it be for any other reason than fear of a collision with Brigham Young and his deluded followers? Most certainly not, for Congress is bound to enforce the laws of the United States, and that one not excepted passed in 1856-7 providing against polygamy.

AN EVENING WITH THE PAST.

BY GRACE GREENWOOD.

I questioned our friend Mr. Gray in regard to Washington's dignity of manner. "Was it," I asked, "of such a lofty and superhuman quality as has been represented? Did it impose on small boys and foreign embassadors alike?"

"Why, as for that, Madam," he replied, "I can safely say that I have seen nothing like it in these latter times. It has gone out of fashion, even with Presidents"

Again I was skeptical and irreverent enough to ask: "How much of it was in the man Geo. Washington, and how much in the station and in the clothes? The costume of gentlemen of that day was, you remember elaborate and what we should call stiff. A man in the Continental uniform of a Major General, or in a full dress suit of black or purple velvet, with rich lace ruffles, with a sword at his side, with his hair tightly queued and thoroughly powdered, was somehow compelled to be dignified."

"Perhaps, so; still, Washington was impressive even for that time, and its costume. I remember hearing, when I was a child, with something like horror, a story of a young Englishman of rank—a traveler in this country, who laid a wager with an American officer that he would dare to accost Washington with familiarty, at one of his own receptions. Accordingly, at the next levee, he just walked boldly up to the President, and laying his hand on his shoulder, he says: 'How are you General? What's new?'

"They said Washington never uttered one word in reply, nor even made a movement of surprise; but he turned slowly and looked at the offender, who afterward said, 'He almost looked me through the floor'; then he crossed to the other side of the room. I don't think the young man ever cared to repeat the experiment."

This anecdote has been told of Governor Morris, but Mr. Gray was quite positive that the rash individual who thus playfully laid his hand on the mane of the Lion of the Republic, was a sort of representative of the British Lion—a sprig of the nobility—one who had looked on the face of great George the Third, and perhaps knew by sight that other George, most profligate of princes in morals and prodigal in waistcoats.

Mr. Gray continued: "Commonly General Washington walked out in the morning without any attendants. He used to go from his house down High street to Second street, on which he often stopped for a few moments, at his watch-maker's to compare his time with that in the shop. Sometimes, I believe he set his watch by the clock in the old State House. He walked down Second to Chestnut, and up Chestnut to the corner of Fifth, where he would stop for a half hour or so at the War [illegible]. From thence, he walked up [illegible] street, and then home. He [illegible] and punctual, that [illegible] and where to [illegible]. Everybody [illegible] and every body made [illegible]—the [illegible] their [illegible] and the women bowing or courtesying. Washington always acknowledged such marks of respect, even from the poorest and humblest, in his own grand way."

Mr. Gray spoke highly of Timothy Pickering, Washington's secretary of war, saying "he was an eminently honest man, and a prodigious worker." He illustrated this Secretary's tireless industry and rigid system by a singular account given him by a family friend or relative, named I believe, White, who for some years was employed in the War Office.

"Mr White," he said, "heard that Pickering wanted a clerk, and he applied for the position early this morning, with a letter of recommendation. Mr. Pickering said little, but gave him a paper to copy. He was pleased with White's handwriting and dispatch he had used, and set him at work at once. They wrote there in almost total silence till noon. Then Mr. Pickering said: 'Now Mr. White, we take an hour for dinner. Be here promptly at one, if you please.' From one to six they worked, then Mr. Pickering says: 'Now, Mr. White, we go to tea. I shall expect to meet you here at seven precisely, to work till nine.' At nine the poor clerk was dismissed for the night, but was told to report for duty at seven in the morning, which he did.

"This day was a sample of most of the days in that office, and the work of both the Secretary and his man was performed standing, at high desks. There was but one chair in the room, and that was sacredly set apart for the President. Nobody ever sat in it but General Washington. He would come in the same hour to a minute, every day, for a certain length of time, and always say, 'Good morning, Colonel Pickering!' in the same measured tone. Then he would lay his hat and gloves. and gold headed cane on the table, and sit down in the big arm chair. Then the Secretary would hand him papers to be examined and signed, or stand before him to receive his orders, saying little himself. After business was over, Washington never staid to chat about lighter matters, not even to 'talk horse;' but took up his hat, gloves, and cane, and with another stately 'Good morning, Colonel Pickering.' went out, and left the Secretary and his man to their work."

"Pray tell me what salary your friend, Mr. White, received."

"Three or four hundred dollars a year. The Secretary himself had fifteen hundred."

What chief clerk of any department of the Government, however well paid feels called upon nowdays to labor like this old time government official.

I asked Mr. Gray what he thought of Robert Morris.

"I think what Washington tho't of him," he said—"that his talents for financiering and his patriotic devotion did very much toward saving the nation.

"My father was Washington's confidential courier, and I have often heard him tell of a call made by the Commander-in-Chief on Mr. Morris at a very critical time, and how nobly it was responded to.

"The army was encamped near Trenton, and was nearly out of supplies, and quite out of money.

"One morning my father was summoned to Washington's tent, and the General said to him: "Gray, in how short a time could you ride down to Philadelphia? I want you to take a letter to Mr. Robert Morris, and there is the utmost need for dispatch."

"My father named the shortest time possible for making the journey with a fleet horse.

"Then just take the best horse in the army and set off at once with this letter," said Washington.

"Well, General," said my father, "the best horse I know of in the army is your chestnut sorrel."

"He did not expect that Washington would allow him to take that horse, for it was his favorite, but he said at once: "Take him." And my father rode him to Philadelphia, and made good time with him.

"When Robert Morris read the letter he asked: "How soon can you start for Trenton with my reply to General Washington, Mr. Gray?"

"As soon, sir as I can get a fresh hose," said my father. "It won't do ride back General Washington's chestnut sorrel."

"Of course not," said Mr. Morris. Go to my stable and take the best horse you can find. I am in haste to assure General Washington that I will do all I can to meet his wishes."

"My father got safely back to headquarters with the reply of Mr. Morris. He said Washington's face lighted up when he read it; but he must have known pretty much what it would be, for he had everything ready for marching, and in five minutes the drums beat and the bugles sounded, and the whole army was in motion. You see, he had written to Morris to supply money and provisions, and Morris had consented, and set to work with all his energy. The morning after my father's hurried visit to Philadelphia, my mother returned from market about six o'clock saying: "It is well I went so early. If I had been a half hour later I should not have been able to get a pound of beef or bacon. Robert Morris is sending his men all about to buy up provisions for the army."

"When, a few months later, she was one night roused up from her sleep by the old watchman crying under her window, 'Past twelve o'clock, and Lord Cornwallis is taken!' she knew, and all our people knew, that Robert Morris had a great deal to do in bringing about that surrender, which virtually ended the war. Yet while Washington was President, Robert Morris was confined in the old debtors' prison in Philadelphia."

"What a shame!" one of us hotly exclaimed. "Why did not Congress pay his debts, and liberate one to whom the nation owed so great a debt?"

"Well that was not thought practicable. His liabilities were immense, and the precedent would have been, perhaps, a little dangerous. He was a rash manager of his own affairs. He bore his misfortunes bravely, they say; but I think he used to look very sad as he walked up and down the narrow prison yard. Sometimes, I remember, he seemed to be listening, in a pleasant sort of way, to old Billy Wood, the play actor, who was also in difficulty. Wood was an educated man, and good company.

I questioned our friend as to his impression of Lafayette, Hamilton, and Burr. But he had only seen them casually, and had very faint recollections of them. Aaron Burr he remembered as a little, alert man, with very bright, dark eyes."

O, those wonderful Edwards eyes, full of power, and fate, and predestination!—they seem to beam on unquenchably in the memory of all on whom their glance ever fell, even carelessly and for a moment!

When Wendell Phillips was a child, Aaron Burr was pointed out to him on Broadway, I think. He did not then know much of the life and the genius, the sin and the sorrow of that famous and infamous old man, but he felt and has never forgotten the power of his eyes. Only to-day I asked a venerable relative, who in his youth met Aaron Burr, what he remembered of him.

"Not very much," he replied; "he was a small man, very quick in his movements, and with remarkable eyes."

Mr. Gray also, I think, described Jefferson as small, or as looking so, in comparison with Washington, that one grand and lofty figure, that evidently stands apart and unapproachable in the long gallery of his memory. He sees that figure still through the beautifying and exalting atmosphere, the rosy mist of childish love and reverence—after all, a truer medium, doubtless, than the cold light of later day theories of life and character, speculative and skeptical.

To him Washington seems both nearer and farther off than he seems to us. Those calm blue eyes, dust and darkness for nearly seventy years shine for the old man; as they shone on the little boy, with a lofty but not unkindly look. Their color to him is like the fair blue of summer skies—not like the cold blue of Alpine glaciers. The more than royal dignity of that martial paternal presence is to him simply and grandly heroic. The pure morality and honest Christain faith of the leader and saviour of the nation; of the reresentative gentleman, with his careful punctuality and unerring propriety, his generous hospitalities and exact economies; of the kind neighbor and just master; of the lover of children, and dogs, and horses, are to him better than all the philanthrophy and much of the religion of our time.

While this friend talked with us, I for one felt that I had taken a dip into the golden past. I had fancied that I too had seen Washington, and had my little head thatched for a moment by his broad white hand; that I had eaten sweet meats from that bounteous table in the old Highstreet house; or better still. met Washington in his stable, among his horses.

But all such pleasant illusions were dispelled by our visitor looking at the clock on the mantel and exclaiming: "Bless me, it is nearly eleven! I must be going."

Then he shook hands all round, and with kindly adieux and graceful compliments left us.

Ah! what a troop of old time shades went out after him into the summer night! Washington, stately as ever, but more human and home like than he had before seemed to me. About him was a faint, agreeable equine order, and the shadow of a stag hound trotted after him. Beside him walked his comely, comfortable wife; and just following went pretty prim Nelly Curtis, and that young prig, Master George Washington Parke Curtis.

We might have pictured as waiting for this august party, in the dim starlight, just outside General T——'s door, the old cream colored chariot, drawn by six spectral bays, with a ghostly John on the box, the lively apparation of a footman beside the steps, and the spook of a postillion mounted in front. These all vanished without sound, or rumble, or gallop, with silent cracks of impalpable whips, and inaudible huzzas from the little boys of long ago.

Robert Morris passed out with head bowed, and after him, with something of a stage stride, "Billy Wood, the play actor." Then went Thos. Jefferson, with his cold, unbelieving face, and Timothy Pickering hurrying back to the War Office, and Alexander Hamilton, with his grave, statesmanlike mein, and Aaron Burr with his quick, nervous step, and his magnetic masterful eyes.

And so closed our evening with the past.

THE son of the famous Russian Engineer, Gen. Todleben, is said to be a greater military genius than his illustrious father.

THE new executioner of Paris is opposed to the further use of the guillotine for despatching criminals. He says the best way of executing them is to strangle them as the old Venetians and Spaniards did, by seating them on a chair and putting around their necks a rope, turned by a fellow in the passage outside, until they are dead.

HATTIE'S BABY.

BY CECILIA L. WHITELEY.

There was no one in the room. It was very quiet in the great house. A few flies, intrusively buzzing on the window panes, and a slight west wind sighing through the lace curtins was the only sound. The cradle stood by the far shaded window that June afternoon. I cautiously peeped into it to take my first look at Hattie's baby. I drew a chair close beside it, and took a prolonged survey of the tiny occupant. It was a very small atom of feminine humanity, just five days old; and its first little cry had been the signal of death to its mother. Her dying sigh passed up to Heaven unconscious of the young mortal she had given to earth. This was the sequence of barely one year of happy wifehood; maternity ended the chapter, and Hattie Ingram, my dearest friend, was gone. Dead at twenty, and life so full of love and beauty for her. It was so sudden, so unexpected, and only a week ago she was smilingly fashioning the daintiest of garments for this little expectant. I could not realize it, and sat looking at her baby in solemn wonder. They said it resembled her as much as a five days' old infant could resemble any one. Dark hair and eyes like the mother, certainly; at least I should say dark eyes, judging from the almost black lashes shading the slumbering orbs, two little sea shell hands, half doubled up, and elevated on a range with the pink ears. I could cover the entire little form, from rosy toe to the little brown head, with my hemstitched handkerchief. She asleep, and full of nervous starts and baby eccentricities, quivering her eyelids and smiling first on one side of her face and then on the other, as if she were indulging in particularly pleasant dreams; and, without parting the rosebud lips, the little chin suggestively trembled. There was sadness in the sight, for I thought how the dear little mouth had never known the touch of the young mother's white bosom. The placing of the baby in this pretty lace decked cradle had laid her in the grave, and the unconscious innocent enjoyed its imaginary feast in a fashion known only to babies, and which is so sweetly beautiful when the mother's foot is on the rocker.

I reverently touched the little limbs faintly traceable beneath the embroidered covering. She stirred, and the motion was like the timid running of a startled mouse. She was all warm and white and dimpled—a round undeveloped nose that would just as leave be flat as not—a trifle puffy about the eyes, and entirely innocent of brows—a slight tendency to a rushy red complexion, and a certain wrinkled look common to infants of her tender age. Yet she was a pretty baby, and I laid my face down to it as I knelt on the floor. The sweet, pure breath came soft against my cheek; and true to instinct, even in sleep, she nestled closer, and went on with her imaginary feast harder than ever.

A step went slowly through the room. I knew it was the widowed father. I did not look up, neither did he pause or speak. He did not see the tears in my eyes, nor I the sorrow in his; but in a year I was his wife, and the baby's second mother. All the village was surprised, and from old Granny Whitney, the queen of gossips, to the lawyer's lady, they united in the dismal hope that I would be kind to Hattie's baby. Old Mrs. Grundy echoed the prayer, and piously [illegible] doleful exclamations [illegible] and the pity that was [illegible] expressed for the motherless little one left to my cruel care was touching indeed.

What could Charley Ingram be thinking of, so fond of Hattie as he pretended to be, and forget her in a year? It was shameful!

I am sure I did not love Charles Ingram half as well as I did Hattie's baby when I married him; and I did not feel conscious smitten in the least, for something whispered that she would rather that I should take her place than any one else, and the tho't gave me strength to brave public opinion and accept Mr. Ingram's cold offer, all for the sake of the little Hattie she had left him. But afterward I loved him better, and began to hunger for the affection which he jealously withheld, and which I fancied I could do without. Forgotten had he? Ah, I knew better, and my heart secretly rebelled, and pined for the love he so lavishly gave where it was not needed or heeded! He married me because the child was a care and burden that he could not dispose of in any other way. He appeared to have but little affection for his winsome baby daughter, who possessed his dead wife's eyes and name. Her existence had been too dearly purchased; she was a continual pain to his morbidly nursed grief, and there was no pleasure in the sight of her, through he scrupulously did his duty in providing proper care and comfort for her in the person of her mother's best friend, Ada Lambert, whom he graciously made Ada Ingram, in order to invest her with the legal right and power. And when my charge was a year old and I two weeks a wife, I took her to her mother's grave, and sat her down on the smooth green mound. She laughed, and cooed, and pulled at the flowers, persistently putting everything she could find in the way of grass, leaves and sticks in her laughing mouth. I would try and be a mother to Hattie's child; there might be a reward and blessing in the endeavor, or at least the knowl of a duty well done.

A tall figure, with eyes moodily bent upon the ground, came slowly along the winding path. I caught up the wondering child and fled.—Concealed behind the thick foliage screening a stately monument, I saw my husband—her husband—sit down in the very spot where only a moment before baby's busy fingers had played with the short grass, and covering his face with his hands sobbed aloud. Wise gossips, and you accused him of forgetting the young buried wife, when the young wife looking on with his child in her arms, could have answered that it was the living —not the dead bride—whom Charles Ingram forgot and neglected. A bitter groan escaped me, and for a moment I wickedly envied the first bride her rest. "Oh, Hattie, Hattie, do you count it a sin against me?" I clasped her baby closer and hurried home. I would live for it, and faithfully devote my life to his daughter, for after those sorrowing tears that I had seen shed above her dust I could never hope to win anything warmer than his regard; but I would retain that, vowing that his child should never miss the mother he so mourned.

Little Hattie did love me, and in a measure I grew contented with his single affection; but when my own bable came, lived a day and died, I missed his love and felt deeply hurt, for he gave me no tender smile or kind word that I had been so near to death for his sake. It was Hattie's little arms that reached up to me from the floor; I motioned the nurse to place her beside me. "Mamma," she lisped, fingering my white cheek in dismay: "Hattie loves mamma."

What wonder that I turned my face to the pillow and cried. What wonder that my heart complained. He might have given me one little sign of love. Hattie tugged at my weak head, and seeing the tears, carefully rubbed them away. Her soothing touch comforted me, and in the midst of her caressing she dropped asleep, and I also, with my forehead against her silky dark hair, and her hand close clasped in mine. A wondrous peace came to my troubled heart. A voice seemed to whisper, "Be of good cheer, long patience will bring a sweet reward."

* * * * *

Mr. Ingram passed by the door of his wife's sick room, and went up to his study without a thought of the invalid. Throwing himself in his easy chair, he folded his arms, leaning his head against the cushioned back, and gave himself up to brooding reveries. The twilight faded and darkness fell about him; still, he sat in his moody attitude, without motion or sound.

Suddenly he became conscious that he was not alone. A slight rustle as of a flowing dress, a subtle influence as of something strange and mysterious, and there beside him stood his lost wife. A cry of joy burst from his lips, and he opened his arms to receive her back to his bosom, but she gently evaded his clasp, and remained silently gazing at him. Her look was angelic, and her voice, sweet as of old, broke the rapt stillness:

"No, I do not need the shelter of your bosom, but another, whom you have exiled, does. While on earth I never had cause to chide you, but through your mistaken love for me, I come from Heaven to show you the true way, and point out your duty to the living."

The vision came nearer, and he saw that an unearthly light shone on her seraphic face, and that the serenity of perfect peace was all about her. The splendor of Heaven and the glory of God was written on each radiant feature, and he felt, with a pang of mortal regret, that she had no need of his repining love, but he could not help a mournful reply:

"You were first and last in my heart, Hattie, and I cannot displace you, though you come from the grave to reproach me that I am faithful to your memory."

"It is sinful to murmur and question God's will. Make Ada happy, and fulfill your earthly mission. She is in your home, and bears your name—love her, protect her. Dry her tears, and cease to weep above my senseless grave. I am memory—she is a reality. Rear your home altar anew; believe in the God whose love is sufficient for me, and in Heaven we shall all be reunited."

She fluttered past him—a moment she lingered, pointing upwards, and vanished.

He sprang up to stay her flight, and—awoke. Only a dream—a phantom of his weary brain. But the moral remained—the spirit warning was not in vain. He saw his error, and a thrill of affection, new and blissful, stirred in his breast for poor neglected Ada. She had been so patient and uncomplaining, enduring without a murmur the gloom and depression of his perverted nature. She had borne his selfish meanness in cheerful resignation, and had loved Hattie's child better than himself. He thought of it and remorsefully determined to make amends. How could he have been so blind as to perversely shut his eye from the pure light shining just beyond his darkness? It was not too late—he would profit by the heavenly mandate, and straightway repaired to Ada's chamber. Charles Ingram for the first time felt guilty, and hesitated to enter her presence—a very culprit, contritely confessing his fault, and [illegible] and Hattie's [illegible] white as marble, but [illegible] handsome and like the other [illegible] wife. Her claims were just as sacred, and her womanly weakness as dependent upon him for strength and affection. It was his duty to love and cherish her as faithfully as he had loved and cherished Hattie, the little time she was with him. She was thin and frail, and might slip away from him into an early grave. There was sudden anguish in the thought. This double blank would leave him utterly desolate. He had been selfishly cruel; and, forgetful of everything but the keen, sharp sting of a fully aroused conscience, he dropped his head to her pillow, and groaned in remorseful bitterness. Little Hattie thrust out a dimpled foot, and tossed up her arms in childish restlessness; but she did not disturb Ada, who sighed and smiled in her fitful sleep. Silently watching the changing expression of her sweet, unconscious face, he saw it gradually assume a look of glad peace, and marvellous calm, a smile in the half open eyes, and a name on the whispering lips—"Hattie!" Was she talking with the spirit wife in her dreams? He believed it, and regarded her with trembling awe.

The hour was holy, and he stood like one listening to a prayer. He was in the presence of angels. Divinity itself stood revealed, and he fell on his knees out of the darkness. Thank God forever! he could say it fervently now.

"Thou wonder sleep, thou marvel death, so near akin, yet so far apart; life is but a day; rest comes after toil. It is well with Hattie, Ada."

She opened her eyes in startled bewilderment. He slipped his arm under her head, and laid it on his bosom:

"Ada, dear wife, I have come for forgiveness. Pardon the past, and the future shall give us more sunshine and less dismal groping among the clouds."

She clung to him in frantic joy.

"Oh, I have found my husband. Dear Charley, I have waited and you have rewarded. Hattie came to meditate between us, and put our stumbling feet on solid ground. She was here but a moment ago, and leaned over me to kiss her baby. I felt her touch on my brow, and I knew the clasp of her hand. She is with us yet, though we cannot see her saintly face, and I am happy."

To come back to the first person—I permitted an imaginary second to relate the above for diffidence sake.

I was sick, and weak, and languishing for Charley Ingram's love; and when it came so full and strong, I fainted, trying to thank God for its bestowal. His tears fell on my darling's sunny head, and I kissed the hand he offered supplicating my forgiveness, and I went to sleep on his bosom, warm-folded in his arms, and my love and my life was complete.

"Hattie's baby" grew a fine, and healthy young lady among my romping boys and girls, and those omiuously hinting of the evils and cruelties of stern stepmothers, and predicting a hard childhood to the infant given to my dubious care, were forced to admit that Ida Ingram, though she did shock public sentiment by accepting the widower of a year, had in everything done her duty by his child. She stands beside me now, so like her mother, my silky-haired darling yet; and, in looking at her, I bless the day I became the theme of scandal-loving tongues, and the guardian of "Hattie's baby."

THE ELECTIONS.

Republicans Victorious.

On last Tuesday one week ago, State elections were held in Iowa, Ohio and Pennsylvania. The Republicans were successful in all of them. In Iowa our majority is near 30,000 with a Legislature nearly all Republican.

In Ohio Governor Hays (Rep) is re-elected by a majority of near 10,000. Both Branches of the Legislature are said to be Republican. If this is true, the Fifteenth Amendment is safe.

In Pennsylvania we have elected Geary and Williams, the former by 4,842, and the latter by about double that majority. The Legislature is strongly Republican. Glory enough for one day.

IN our issue of last week, we stated that from the election returns then in, we believed Arthur Shields was defeated for Sheriff by about sixty votes. The official table published elsewhere in this paper defeats him and elects Mr. Graebing by one hundred and ninety five majority. This shameful result is accounted for in several ways, the most of which, are decidedly amusing to those who are not novices in political trickery. One class of persons assert that the "whiskey men" of the county voted against Shields because of his supposed temperance proclivities. Another class of persons allege that he was defeated because he was a United Presbyterian, and "it was thought necessary to teach that Church a lesson which it would not soon forget." A third class, with a great deal of confidence assure us, that the "defeated candidates for the nomination for Sheriff" last May, met in this place during the recent Fair, and entered into a combination to defeat their successful competitor on the second Tuesday of October, and that now we see the result of their joint efforts. Now side by side with these theories, let us place a few facts: If it is true that the "whiskey men" of the county 'made a set' against Arthur Shields, why did they not also "make a set" against nearly the whole Republican ticket, for to its credit be it said, it was composed almost entirely of men who are averse to the use of or sale of intoxicating drinks. Why vote against one of these and for five or six others, when the views of all, on this question, were the same? The Sheriffalty, too, had neither a direct or remote bearing on the License question of this county. Thus that theory falls to the ground.

If it was thought "necessary to teach the United Presbyterian Church a lesson" why was our candidate for Sheriff made the instrument and at the same time the victim? There were other members of that denomination on the ticket beside Mr. Shields, and that being the case, is it likely that those who wished to "teach the U. P. Church a lesson" would single out a man against whom nothing evil could be said, and whose gaping wounds attested how bravely and well he had served his country in her day of peril? Not at all. If the blow had been intended for the U. P. Church it would have fallen elsewhere than on Arthur Shield's head. It would have come down on some one of whom it could not have been said: "he was a wounded soldier."

The idea that the "defeated candidates for Sheriff" entered into a combination during our fair to defeat their successful competitor, is a very weak invention, to say the least of it. To begin with, not more than one half of the defeated candidates for that office were at the fair at all, and those who were present would much rather have taken each other by the lugs, and gone through a pummeling exhibition than to have sat down side by side, and cordially conspired to defeat Arthur Shields, who, (with one exception) next to themselves, respectively, was the second choice of all for that office. Besides this, we know of five or six of these "defeated candidates" who labored zealously to elect Mr. Shields and the vote he received in their immediate localities shows that they labored effectively.

Nay the truth is, a bargain and sale was effected between some trading Republicans and the Democratic leaders, by means of which a portion of our ticket was to be cut so that another portion of it might be helped. The friends of Messrs. Graebing and Donehoo offered better terms than the friends of others on the Democratic ticket, and hence the bargain was struck with them. That arrangement defeated Sergeant Arthur Shields, and his temperance opinions or church relations or defeated competitors had nothing whatever to do with the disaster that befel him. This is evident to us from the admissions of a prominent Democrat from the western part of the county, from the manner in which the bogus Graebing and Donehoo tickets were printed and distributed, and from the character of the official returns found elsewhere in this paper. Who the "high" contracting parties were we do not now definitely know, and who this betrayal of our party was intended to and did benefit we leave to the judgment of our readers.

GEORGE DEISS, clerk in the Prothonotaries Common Pleas office of Philadelphia was arrested on Saturday night last, by Lieut. Killacky, of the Mayors police, without a warrant and locked him up in a cell where he was kept all night. While in custody, the key of his office was taken from him, and the police entered the office, which this morning bore evidence of having been ransacked. Deiss was released this forenoon when he made complaint before Allison, who had Killacky arrested and held him in $5,000 bail to answer the charge. He was reprimanded by the Judge in the severest terms. His only excuse was that he arrested Deiss as a suspicious character.

Mr. Simpson President of the Board of Return Judges, is not so seriously injured as at first reported.

THE Soldiers ticket in Lawrence County was elected on last Tuesday, one week ago. The contest turned mainly on the candidates for Treasurer and Prothonotary. Messrs Warnoch and Haus were the regular Republican candidates, and Messrs Porter and McGinnis the irregular or soldier's ticket candidates. The two latter were elected—the former by about 1300 majority and the latter by a majority of about 450. This result is looked upon in Lawrence county as a great victory by the David Sankey and Lawrence Journal wing of the Republican party in that county.

IT is well known that Gen. Sherman accepted the office of Secretary of War only temporarily, or until the President could make a permanent appointment. The President has now appointed Major General Wm. M. Belknap, of Keokuk, Iowa. Major General Belknap is a graduate of Princeton College, New Jersey. He served in the army from the first to the last day of the late war. He commanded one of the Divisions of the fifteenth army corps in General Sherman's last two campaigns, with great credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of his superiors. He is about thirty-eight years of age, in excellent health, and is a lawyer by profession.

COLLECTOR WILCOX and Assessor Furnace, of the Third District of Virginia, report to the department their operations in connection with the suppression of illicit distilleries in that State. Seven counties were visited in twenty-three days, and an area of over two thousand miles traveled. Forty-seven illicit stills, with an aggregate producing capacity of 3,160 gallons per day were destroyed. 800 gallons of apple brandy were confiscated, and as much more destroyed for lack of transportation. The distilleries were located either in deep mountain ravines or at the termini of roads seldom traveled by any except parties engaged in the fraudulent business.

INTELLIGENCE from Japan is to the effect that the clerical party is making every effort to secure the expulsion of foreigners from the country. The movement has some strong supporters in the press, and numerous petitions have been addressed to the Government on the subject. One of these documents calls the foreign residents "worms in the lion's belly," and attributes many evil consequence to the introduction of the Christian religion. It is said that the Government has submitted to Parliment the question of driving out aliens and the best means of accomplishing such a result.

JEFFERSON DAVIS says to his admirers who call on him in Baltimore that he has no interest whatever in political affairs, and shall decline all conversation in reference thereto during his trip to Mississippi. He is said to have expressed the hope that the liberal Conservative Republicans of the South and the Democrats of North would succeed in the fall elections. His estimate of parties is that the Northern Democrats represent what is left of the principle of self government, or "White Man's Government," while the Conservative Republicans South represent all that is left of the principle in that section.

ON the morning of the 27th of September, a large and well appointed force of Cubans and Americans, evading the United States authorities, sailed from New York, on the steamer Alabama. This is, the expedition of which we have had various accounts by telegraph. The commander is General Goicuira, and the brigade commanders Generals Steadman and Magruder, both of whom made records on different sides in the late war. The Alabama left the "recruits" at the Florida Keys, where twenty five hundred men were collected awaiting transportation to Cuba. They have reached their destination by this time, although no account of their landing has been received. The New-York Herald says that among the recruits were men from Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh—possibly from this city, some of the machinists and foundry men of whom mention was made some weeks ago.

THREE robbers plundered the store of James Oakley, in Huntington, Long Island, on Friday night last. Oakley discovered them, when they beat him almost to death, set fire to his store, barn, dwelling, and then escaped. His property was all burned and his life is in danger.

THE State Republican Central Committee of Minnesota have issued an address in explanation of their course in regard to Mr, Spencer, the candidate for Secretary of State. While they acknowledge he was not guilty of any intentional wrong in placing certain moneys to his own credit, instead of handing them over to the Treasury, still the act was an irregular one, and susceptible of various constructions, and they deem it sufficient for his withdrawal from the field.

AT Frederick, Maryland, on Thursday October 14, large crowds received the President. Col. W. P. Manby warmly welcomed him in a speech, and expressed the thanks of the multitude for his presence on this occasion. The President replied: "I have great pleasure in visiting for the first time the city of Frederick, of which I heard so much during the period of the late rebellion, and which stood up manfully for the maintenance of a whole Union. I expected to visit this city some years ago, but found myself unable to do so; but now that I have found so many friends, and been so gratified with what I have seen of your fair, and enjoyed of your hospitality, I hope at some future time to visit you again.

Three cheers for the President of the United States were heartily given, when the President repaired to the Committee room and received the multitude, shaking hands as they severally passed before him.

CAPT. George Wentworth, whose arrest for rape on the high seas, which was noticed a few days ago, at Bangor Me., had a hearing before United States Commissioner Carr yesterday, which resulted in fully committing him for trial before the United States District Court in April next. The penalty being death, the offense is not bailable.

THE President, on last Wednesday, appointed Gen. William Worth Belknap, of Iowa as Secretary of War, Vice General Sherman. The new Secretary is a son of the late Col. Belknap of the regular army, who died in the service. He is an educated and cultivated man, and while a Republican his friends represent him as not an active politician. He was a lawyer in Iowa at the breaking out of the war, and entered the service as Major of the Fifteenth Iowa, in which rank he commanded his regiment at Shiloh. While Grant's army lay at Young's Point he was provost marshal of the seventeenth army corps. As Colonel he commanded the Iowa brigade during the Atlanta campaign, and was promoted to Brigadier General for bravery in battle on the 22d of July, when McPherson was killed. After the march to the sea he was brevetted Major General at Savannah, and assigned to the command of a division in the Seventeenth Army Corps. He continued with his division on the march through the Carolinas, and was with it in battle at Bentonville. In 1866 he was made Collector of Internal Revenue in Iowa, which position he has held to the present time. At the Internal Revenue office he is regarded as one of the best officers in the service. Civilians generally know nothing of him, and so are surprised at the appointment. Western army officers and those who were with him in the field regard the selection as a very good one. General Sherman speaks in high terms of him. It is understood General Sherman suggested Belknap's name to the President, when the latter requested Sherman to write and see if he would accept if appointed. Belknap replied in the affirmative. The President then telegraphed to him to remain and finish up his present business. The new Secretary telegraphed he would be in Washington in ten days. This appointment knocks the noise out of the Pennsylvania politicinas. They fondly hoped to get one of their own number into the War office, so he would appoint "everybody and his seedy relative" to some snug fat place. We honor General Grant for flanking them, and fondly hope that his good-sense will always cause him to avoid Pennsylvania policicians as unworthy of his favors or notice. Pennsylvania herself had far better be left out in the cold until the crack of doom unless she presents persons for Cabinet appointments other than those who accept them only that they may enrich themselves and friends. In short, if our State cannot offer men for leading public positions who enjoy the confidence of the people, Gen. Grant does exactly right in snubbing those who apply without this requisite.

THE Salt Lake Telegraph, owned by the champion marryist of Utah, complains that the United States Judges have refused naturalization papers to those who would not say, when questioned, that they were not polygamists, or not in favor of the system. If the candidate for naturalization refused to answer questions on this subject, the Telegraph says it was immediately assumed that he was guilty, and naturalization papers were refused him. The asumption that a Mormon practices or encourages polygamy is not a very violent one, and the only question is as to the right of the judges to refuse naturalization on this ground. The law requires, in addition to other conditions, that the candidate shall show to the satisfaction of the judges "that he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same." The Telegraph does not see any immorality or hostility to good order in the possession of a few dozen wives, more or less.

THE Atlantic Cable is reported to have received a fresh injury. The cable laid in 1866 has parted at a distance of about seventy miles from Heart's Content, and this is the fourth accident that has happened to it on the Newfoundland side. In the middle of August, however, a fault in the same cable was discovered at a short distance from Valentia Bay, Ireland. These fractures have not been mended, as the rough weather has prevented the sailing of the repair steamer. The 1865 cable, which was picked up in mid ocean, where it had been lost in the attempt to lay it, has continued to work uninterruptedly, while the one laid in 1866 has suffered from five mishaps. The reason assigned for this immunity is that the 1865 cable was laid in a carefully surveyed channel, while the 1866 cable was laid over rough sunken rocks and during unfavorable weather. Had the lost cable of 1865 not been recovered the communication between England and America would have been interrupted for a considerable period of time on five occasions. Surplus cables are stored both at Heart's Content and Valentia, so as to repair any fault as soon as possible.

INTELIGENCE has been received from Gen. Hurlbut, our minister to the Republic of Columbia, to the effect that his interviews with the President of that government, respecting the Isthmus Canal project, are very favorable. The Cushing treaty for the canal was badly received by the Columbian Senate, because the country was shorn of too many privileges and requisites. Another one will be framed on a more liberal basis.

A FULL investigation into the case of the Cuban steamer Hornet, now in possession of the United States Marshal at Wilmington, N. C. will develope some new and interesting features of the proceedings of the insurgents, but will not disclose anything relative to their attempts at diplomacy. Among other matters, it will be discovered that the Hornet was purchased, manned, equipped and presented to the Cubans by a distinguished New York capitalist, who was subsequently prevailed upon to accept a present, of equal nominal value, in Cuban bonds. It is not improbable that certain Government officials may be found to be implicated in the affair, as they are understood to have interested themselves in the enlistment of the crew, But it will not appear, under any circumstances, that Mr. Lemus or any member of the insurgent legation here were interested except in an indirect manner.

A writer in the Scientific American has the following that is curious concerning the effect of the Pacific Railroad on the climate of the Plains: "The scouts, guides, and hunters all agree in stating that on the Plains, as far back as their experience goes, little or no rains have fallen during the summer; but the experience of last summer and this one is, that we have sufficient rain for farming purposes, and the crops of hay and other produce raised here now attest it. The hunters with whom I have conversed all agree in stating that the rains only fall inside of a belt across the Plains, of fifty miles in width, of which the railroad track is the center; that when they go beyond that belt the grass is red, crisped, and burnt looking, while all vegetation inside is luxuriant. Has the iron of the rails or the upturned ground the credit of the change?"

A PEACE ALLIANCE, it is announced by the London News, was entered into between Austria, Prussia, and Great Britain, at the time when the prospect of the speedy death of the French Emperor was believed to be certain. Napoleon, however, recovered, and Lord Clarendon was commissioned to inform the Emperor of the understanding between the great powers and to explain their motives. It is also announced that Clarendon will avail himself of the opportunity to inform the Emperor that he will not be allowed to divert attention in France from his domestic policy, by waging war against Prusia. Every effort, it is believed will be made by the great powers to induce Prussia not to give any provocation to France.

JEFFERSON DAVIS is represented as in much better health than formerly, and as manifesting much sorrow of the news of the death of Ex-President Pierce, whose secretary he was during his entire term as President. Davis's family remains in Europe. He was registered as Jefferson Davis of Mississippi, and will proceed to that State within a few days.

THE Empress Eugenie, of France, was received at Constantinople on the 14th inst. by the Sultan with the most imposing and magnificent ceremonies. The waters of the Bosphorus were covered with boats gaily decorated, and the banks crowded with spectators.

THE President and party left Frederick, Md., on Saturday morning for the Antietam battle field. They traveled over the mountains in carriages. On the way Secretary Cox and Col. Vernon pointed out the several scenes of the conflict in which they were both engaged. The South Mountain being of peculiar interest to the President and General Sherman, who made many inquiries concerning the hostilities at that point. General Sherman, with several other gentlemen, hastily passed over the ground on foot, while the horses were resting, in order to have a better understanding of the events and movements of that day. Secretary Cox was a General in the Army of the Potomac, and assumed command of the 9th Corps after Reno was killed at South Mountain. At Middletown large crowds surrounded the open carriage of the President, greeting him with cheers, and not forgetting Gen. Sherman in their welcome. Miniature flags and handkerchiefs were waived by the ladies, and the bells of the village were rang. A reception equally enthusiastic was given at Boonsboro, and also at Keedysville. The party arrived at Antietam Cemetery at half past two o'clock. A large crowd of residents of the vicinity were in waiting. Judge Wiesell, of Hagerstown, received the President in a brief address, in which he spoke of the eminent service the President had rendered to the country, and of the graves of the dead who fell in defence of the Union, and concluded his speech by saying he had been instructed by the citizens of Hagerstown to invite the President and his party to visit that county seat. The President returned his thanks and said he had been highly gratified with his visit to Western Maryland, but as they had to take the cars at half past three o'clock, they would not have time to vist Hagerstown. General Sherman, Secretary Cox and Postmaster General Creswell, were then severally introduced to the crowd. Cheers were then given for the President and Gen. Sherman. A number of ladies and children were crowded into the presence of these gentlemen, and engaged in hand shaking, which evidently afforded them much pleasure. The little children equally enjoyed the kisses of the President. After a survey of the grounds, the party re-entered their carriages on their return to Keedysville where cheers were spontaneously given for the President and Gen. Sherman and Cox. A special train was in waiting at Keedysville, several miles from the cemetery, and this brought the party to Washington, where they arrived at nine o'clock Saturday evening. The people of Frederick and elsewhere in western Md., profusely extended their hospitalities, and the party expressed their pleasure at the manner of their reception.

At the same time and place, all the right, title, interest and claim of defendants of in and to those two certain lots of ground, being numbered 50 and 51 in Lewis Reno's plan or first division of lots in the borough of Rochester, bounded and described as follows, to wit: Fronting each lot fifty feet on Jefferson Street and extending 175 feet to an alley; and bounded on the north-east by New York street; on the south-west by lot No. 49; and the same lots numbered 50 and 51 that Louis Reno and Marion his wife, by deed bearing date the 28th day of December, A. D. 1863, conveyed to Joseph Vandervert; and Joseph Vandervert and Margaret his wife by deed bearing date July 6th, 1868, conveyed the same to Geo. W. Duck. There is erected on lot No. 50 a two story frame dwelling house, with kitchen back and cellar underneath, and outbuildings. The two lots are in one inclosure and planted with fruit trees.

Seized and taken in execution as the property of George W. Duck and Eliza Jane his wife, at the suit of Thomas Dawson.

Correction.—We stated last week that S. Magaw, auditor of the estate of Daniel Evans, would make distribution of said estate at New Brighton on Oct. 20th, instead of the 29th. See the advertisement in its corrected form this week.

The election is past, but Hanauer is still selling goods lower than any other man in Beaver.

Mayor of New Castle.—It affords us pleasure to notice that our former fellow citizen, M. B. Welsh, esq., was on Tuesday of last week elected Mayor of New Castle. Mr. W., we doubt not, will make a faithful and efficient officer.

Ladies read this! J. H. Bence, of Beaver, has just received direct from the importer, real French velvet flowers, which he is enabled to sell cheaper than the imitation. These flowers are different from the one's sold in this part of the country, as well as prettier and cheaper. 3t.

Do not buy hats or bonnets until you have seen Hanauer's Goods.

A No. 1 Carbon Oil, Petroleum Fluid, 40 cents per gallon, Non-Explosive Fluid, Crude Oil, Lamps, Lamp Chimneys, Lamp Wicks, Sun, Comet and Non-Explosive Burners, and Candles, at Hugo Andriessen's Beaver Drug Store.

Arm Broken.—Mr. John M'Clure, who resides near New Galilee, this county, fell from an apple tree one day last week and broke his arm, besides injuring his head considerably. His wounds —though painful—are not of a dangerous character.

Black alpaca suits are still at a premium at Bence's, Beaver.

☞ Enormous lot of new style hats at Hanauer's: 25c, 50c and 75cts each.

Meeting of Co. Return Judges.—The Return Judges of Beaver county met at the Court House in Beaver, on last Friday, and organized by appointing Robt. White, esq., of Chippewa tp., Chairman; and Prof. G. M. Fields, of Fallston, and W. B. Dunlap, esq., of Bridgewater, Secretaries. Their footing up of the vote will be found elsewhere in this paper. It was quite late in the afternoon on Friday before the Judges got through with their labors and adjourned.

Good black alpaca for 25 cts. per yrd., at Bence's.

Waterproof and ladies cloths at Bence's. 3t.

A MERITORIOUS ARTICLE.—We are tired of this idea of "puffing" humbug medicines that are constantly thrown into drug stores, and are merely an imposition on the community. But, when an article comes into the market that is really worthy of comment, we are happy to make public acknowledgement, trusting that some benefit may arise therefrom. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., is the proprietor of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and we take pleasure in calling attention to it because we know it to be a good article, and a sure cure for that loathsome disease, Catarrh. It is sold by most druggists, or may be obtained for sixty cents through the mail by addressing the proprietor as above.—Cleveland Herald. 2t.

Flannels cheap at Bence's.

The Books for subscribing capital stock to the Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railway, were opened at the American Hotel, in Canton, Ohio, on Monday of last week.—Wellsville Union.

This is the road in which Beaver county is interested, but we regret to say we have heard nothing in regard to it for the last two or three weeks, save the above from the Union.

A fair trial will convince the most skeptical that Whittlesey's Dyspepsia Cure is what it purports to be, a certain remedy for Dyspepsia and Sick Headache.

Good Farming.—Jas. Young, esq., of Darlington tp., and residing near Enon Valley, has presented us with a basket of apples that are 'unbeatable.' They are of the 'Pound Sweet' and 'Pearman' varieties, and many of them weigh one pound each. The tree from which the 'Pound Sweets' were taken yielded this year twenty-five bushels of apples, all sound, and excellently flavored.

Mr. Young also informs us that he had a grape vine, this season, of four year's growth, which bore one thousand bunches of grapes, and furnished sixty feet of vine. It is of the Concord variety.

From two acres of oats sown by the same gentleman last spring, he harvested 116 bushels. Fifty-eight bushels to the acre sounds like old time crops. Mr. Young is comparatively a stranger to us, but from the above we take it that he 'lives at home' in Darlington tp. He has our thanks for his remembrance of the printer.

Go to Jas. A. Fortune's, Diamond, Rochester, for the cheapest dry goods in Beaver county.

Teacher's Institute.—The annual Teachers County Institute will be held at New Brighton, commencing on Monday Oct. 25th, at 2 o'clock, p. m. Able instructors will be present to assist in the work of the Institute, among whom are Prof. Cooper of the State Normal School at Edinboro, and Mr. Randall of the Oswego Training School, New York. Teachers should make it a point to be present promptly, and friends of education throughout the county should take an interest in these annual meetings.

The hospitality of the citizens of New Brighton will be extended to the members of the Institute.

A Correction.—In our last issue it is stated at the head of the Jury lists that Court Commences on the 2d and 3d Mondays of November. It should read on the 2d and 4th Mondays. There will be no Court during the third week of November in consequence of the Supreme Court being in Session at Pittsburgh at that time, and the business of some of our attorneys requiring their attendance there.

Ladies and Gents underwear, cheap at Bence's, Beaver.

The election being over and winter soon to set in, people will very naturally look around to see where they can get the best and cheapest clothing. This is an important matter, and deserves no little attention at the hands of all. Scores of persons hereabouts have bought clothing at M. H. Donehoo's, and with one accord they all say that none sell cheaper or make better clothing then does he. "What everybody says must be true." Therefore, go to Donehoo's and get all coats, pants and vests that yourself and family may need.

☞ Sacking velvets very cheap at Bence's.

The County Commissioners of this county paid an official visit last week to some of the public institutions near Pittsburgh, in which Beaver county is interested. These institutions embraced the House of Refuge, the Asylum and the Penitentiary. They found everything in them in good order and moving along smoothly. There are four persons in the House of Refuge sent from this county, and two in the Penitentiary. Eighteen of the inmates of Dixmont are from this county, all of whom are comfortably situated, and getting along as well as could be expected.

Ladies purchasing alpaca's should examine Bence's stock before purchasing elsewhere.

An Elegant Sheet.—The new Illustrated Circular of the Iron City College is doubtless the finest thing of the kind ever gotten up in this country. Copies of the same can be obtained free of charge, on addressing the Principals, Smith & Cowley, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Black kid gloves ninety cents a pair at Bence's, Beaver.

☞ The Normal School at Edinboro has a good reputation. The State assists those who intend to teach.

We are pleased to learn from Prof. Taylor that the Seminary under his care is so well attended, Pupils who intend to enter at the middle of the session can enter this week without extra charge. The institution, in every department, is systematic and thorough. Large classes have been formed in Latin, French, and German, Geometry, Geology and Book-keeping—showing that every advantage is here offered for an extended education. Prof. Beuter is also at his post, prepared to give instruction on the piano, organ or violin, and we are glad to see that so many of our citizens are availing themselves of his superior talent as a musician and instructor. Miss Spencer is again at her work in the Ornamental Department, prepared to instruct in Oil Painting or water colors, drawing or wax flowers. Send in your son or daughter to this school if you would be sure of their making advancement.

Miners Almanac.—We are indebted to the publisher, Henry Miner esq., of Pittsburgh, for his almanac for 1870. It is calculated and edited by Sanford C. Hill, the veteran "almanacist" of this part of the country. Price ten cents. Send and get one.

EDITOR ARGUS; Although the quietness of the political campaign of 1869 has been unequalled for some years, the citizens of Industry township did not feel disposed to let it pass without breaking the monotony and giving Democracy, as usual, another stunning blow. This was accomplished on the eve of the 11th of October, when an enthusiastic audience was addressed by James H. Cunningham of Beaver, by whom the political issues of the day were thoroughly discussed and the audience entertained by an eloquent address of two hours and twenty minutes. The meeting was a perfect success; and the opinion of the people was that the young speaker was destined to make his mark before many years rolled around. REP.

French whalebone corsets at 75 cts, at Bence's.

It is getting so we can hardly go into a Drug Store, without seeing piles of Constitution Bitters. The sale must be enormous, and to obtain such results, must be extremely gratifying to Messrs. Seward & Bentley, the proprietors. They seem to have touched the magic wanted when they introduce these Bitters, and no Bitters could have attained such a popularity unless of real worth.

All other remedies giving way to Seward's Cough Cure.

Superior French whalebone corsets only 90 cents at J. H. Bence's, Beaver.

An immense stock of goods just opened at Bence's favorite establishment in Beaver. All in want of anything in our line give an early call.

Dry Goods and Notions at wholesale. We call the attention of our Merchants to the card of Messrs. Arbuthnot Shannon & Co., 115 Wood street Pittsburgh, in another column of our paper. This is an old established House, and is proverbial for fair dealing and selling goods at living prices. They have now on hand a very large and well selected stock of Dry Goods. Cloths, Woolen Goods and Notions, and are also agents for the celebrated Fullerton Barred Flannels, Greenville Barred Flannels, Blankets and Yarns. Merchants will study their interest by dealing at this house.

Cold Blooded Murder.—Last night was the scene of desperate riots. The polls had scarcely closed when the streets became the theatre of numberless fights. Drunkenness and disorder reigned supreme. About nine o'clock the final affray took place. A crowd of drunken rioters rushed up Main street pursuing a gang of no less drunken negroes, and stones flew like hail in every direction. In the midst of the melee, John Arnold, a quiet, inoffensive man, who was passing along the street was struck with a stone and instantly killed. News was immediately carried to Esq. Hornish, and the Justice promptly proceeded to the spot. Dr. Jones examined the body and pronounced life extinct, whereupon the justice proceeded to empanel a jury, and sent information to Coroner Barker. The latter being confined by sickness, Esq. Hornish proceeded to conduct the investigation. A number of witnesses were examined, whose testimony was so confused that nothing definite could be ascertained. Suspicion, however, was directed to two negroes and they were put under arrest. The inquest adjourned at eleven o'clock, and will proceed further with the investigation to-day. This morning Dr. Jones held a post mortem examination upon the body.

It is proper to say that the highest praise is due to Mr. Hornish for the promptness with which he acted in the matter. At the earlier stage of the riotous proceeding that officer had quelled several disturbances, and made a number of arrests. Had the borough authorities acted with the same decision and promptness the unfortunate victim of the mob would, without doubt, be still alive. We earnestly trust, for the well being of the community, that measures will be taken hereafter to organize such an efficient police force here as shall prevent the reign of mob law and the sacrifice of innocent lives.—Washington Reporter.

A Newly Invented and first class Family Cook Stove.—At the Burgetstown fair yesterday we noticed a novel, newly invented patent coal stove, from the well known and extensive foundry of Messrs. Joseph H. Greer & Bro., Bridgewater, Pa., which excited much comment among the visitors. It is circular in shape, occupying but little room, and is supplied with seven plates. The heat is regulated with a damper, so that it can in an instant be transferred either to the plates or thrown to the oven in any desired intensity—advantages which will be duly appreciated by housekeepers. The oven is supplied with a movable rack which can readily be changed into any desired position. The stove is supplied with registers, and throughout is as pretty a piece of workmanship as we have ever seen, all the parts being smoothly finished and put together in a neat fitting manner. It sells for from twenty-five to twenty-nine dollars including outfit. There are many special merits in this stove which must combine to make it a great favorite when once known. We hear that the Messrs. Greer propose to manufacture them largely for sale, and any of our friends contemplating purchasing a stove should not fail to award them proper attention and consideration.—Pitt. Gaz.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application, Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

NOTICE—LIME.—To builders, masons, bricklayers and plasterers, get your lime at the

MONITOR LIME KILNS,

Vanport, and save time and money. It is the very best Lime, as it is stronger and will make more mortar, and there is no waste to it. We have none but the best stone and it is burned just right; the coal is not mixed with the stone to burn, so that there is no ashes or cinder in it.

Bricklayers need not sift it or run it off to make mortar, which will save a good deal of time. You can always get it fresh—red hot if you want it—and in LARGE LUMPS.

Refer to all who have used it. Some parties interested in other kilns speak against it and try to sell an inferior article at the same price. Call and see it, or try some.

Lime delivered promptly to order at

Hon. David Davis, of Illinois, appointed December 8th 1861, by President Lincoln, from the Seventh circuit, composed of the States of Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin.

Hon. Stephen J. Field, of California, appointed March 10th, 1863, by President Lincoln, from the ninth circuit; composed of the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada.

The vacancy is in the Fifth circuit, composed of the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas.

There will be two annual sessions of the Supreme Court hereafter in Washington—one in the autumn, the other in the spring. That which began on Monday last is the first held at this season of the year, and will attract during its sittings many of the leading lawyers of the country. On the first Monday of December the following act of Congress will take effect:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Supreme Court of the United States shall hereafter consist of the Chief Justice of the United States and eight associate justices, any six of whom shall constitute a quorum; and for the purposes of this act there shall be appointed an additional associate justice of said court.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That for each of the nine existing judicial circuits there shall be appointed a circuit judge, who shall reside in his circuit, and shall possess the same power and jurisdiction therein as the justice of the Supreme Court allotted to the circuit. The circuit courts in each circuit shall be held by the justice of the Supreme Court allotted to the circuit, or by the circuit judge of the circuit, or by the district judge of the district sitting alone, or by the justice of the Supreme Court and circuit judge sitting together, in which case the justice of the Supreme Court shall preside, or in the absence of either of them by the other (who shall preside) and the district judge. And such courts may be held at the same time in the different districts of the same circuits, and cases may be heard and tried by each of the judges holding any such court sitting apart by direction of the presiding justice or judge, who shall designate the business to be done by each. The circuit judges shall each receive an annual salary of $2,000.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall affect preme court as judges of the circuit court, except in the appointment of clerks of the circuit courts, who in each circuit shall be appointed by the circuit judge of that circuit, and the clerks of the district courts shall be appointed by the judges thereof respectively; provided, that the present clerks of said courts shall continue in office till other appointments be made in their place, or they be otherwise removed.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Chief Justice and of each justice of the Supreme Court to attend at least one term of the circuit court in each district of his circuit during every period of two years.

SEC. 5 And be it further enacted, That any judge of any court of the United States, who, having held his commission as such at least ten years shall after having attained to the age of seventy years, resign his office, shall thereafter, during the residue of his natural life, receive the same salary which was by law payable to him at the time of his resignation.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect on the first Monday of December, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine.

Approved April 10, 1869.

In each of the nine circuits above described one judge will be appointed by the President to discharge most of the local business heretofore transacted by the members of the Supreme Court. The President has made no selections as yet. When he does make them he will have a long list of distinguished jurists from which to choose. He will also be called upon to fill the vacancy in the Fifth circuit, created by the death, on the 5th of July, 1869, of the Georgia patriot, Hon. James M. Wayne.

The subjoined biographies of the eight members of the Supreme Court are historically interesting:

SALMON P. CHASE.

He was born in Cornish, New Hampshire, January 13, 1808. His education began at home, and was continued at the schools and academies of New Hampshire and Central Ohio, and completed at the Cincinnati College and at Dartmouth, New Hampshire, graduating in 1826. He studied law in Washington city with William Wirt, and practiced his profession at Cincinnati, Ohio, for many years. His first public position was that of school examiner in Cincinnati, in 1839; in 1840 he was a city councilman; in 1845 he projected what was called a Liberty Convention; was a member of the Free Soil Convention held at Buffalo in 1848; and was a Senator in Congress, from Ohio from 1849 to 1855, and elected Governor of Ohio in 1855, and re-elected in 1857. In 1860 he was again chosen a Senator in Congress; but the day after he took his seat he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury in President Lincoln's Cabinet, but resigned in September, 1864. It was while the country was passing through the trials of the great rebellion that the national finances were successfully carried through under his administration. He was a member also of the Peace Congress of 1861. On the 6th of December, 1864, he was appointed by President Lincoln Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to succeed R. B. Taney. By virtue of his position as Chief Justice, he presided over the Senate while acting as a court of impeachment during the trial of President Johnson.

SAMUEL NELSON.

One of the biographers calls him the oldest man on the bench. He has spent forty-five years in the judicial harness, yet his clear eye and manly frame indicate rare vigor of brain and body.

He has a face of rare refinement, and his manners are those of the old school. His familiarity with decisions and practices, his thorough knowledge of the law, and his constant attention to his duties, make him one of the pillars of the court, while his polished address and genial nature have established him as one of the favorites of Washington society.

NATHAN CLIFFORD.

He was born in Rumney, Grafton county, N. H., August 18, 1803. He fitted for college at the Haverhill Academy, and completed his education at the Hampton Literary Institution. He studied law, and, after being admitted to the bar, removed to Maine in 1827. He was elected to the Legislature from York county, in 1830, and re-elected for three years, during the last two occupying the post of Speaker. In 1834, he was appointed Attorney General for the State of Maine, which office he held for four years; and he was a Representative in Congress from 1839 to 1843. In 1846 he was appointed by President Polk, Attorney General of the United States, which office he held until March, 1847, when he was appointed Commissioner to Mexico. When peace was declared between the United States he settled in Portland, devoting himself to his profession; and in 1858 was appointed by President Buchanan an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

DAVID DAVIS.

He was born in Cecil county, Md., March 9, 1815; graduated at Kenyon College, Ohio, in 1832; studied law in Massachusetts, and went through a legal course at the law school of New Haven; in 1835 he removed to Illinois, and was immediately admitted to the bar, and soon afterwards settled in Bloomington; in 1844 he was elected to the State Legislature; in 1847 to the convention which formed the present State constitution; in 1848 he was elected by the people judge of the Eighth judicial circuit of the State; re-elected in 1855 and also 1861, but, before completing his last term, he was appointed by President Lincoln a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. He was for many years the intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, rode the circuit with him every year, and was a delegate at large to the "Chicago Convention" of 1860, which nominated Mr. Lincoln for President. Just before entering upon his duties as a justice of the Supreme Court he was appointed a visitor to the West Point Academy.

STEPHEN J. FIELD

He was born in Haddam, Connecticut, November 4, 1821, and his father was David Dudley Field; while yet a youth he travelled in Europe and the East; graduated at Williams College in 1837; studied law in New York city with his brother, David Dudley Field, with whom he formed a law partnership; in 1848 he made a second visit to Europe; toward the close of 1849 he went to California; in January 1850 he was elected First Alcade of the city of Marysville, and continued the practice of his profession; in October of the same year he was elected to the Legislature, where he took a leading part in moulding the judiciary of the State; in 1857 he was elected a judge of the Supreme Court of California for six years, and was elevated to the position of Chief Justice, and in 1863 he was appointed, by President Lincoln, a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. In the discharge of his official duties he is obliged to travel annually over 13,000 miles. He is a brother of Cyrus W. Field, the distinguished projector of the Atlantic telegraph.

ROBERT C. GRIER.

He was born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, March 5, 1794; he graduated at Dickinson College in 1812; studied law, and came to the bar in 1817, practicing his profession in Northumberland, Columbia, Lycoming, Union and Schuylkill counties; was appointed president judge of Allegheny county in 1833, when he became a resident of Pittsburgh; and in 1846 he was appointed, by President Polk, an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and since 1848, he has been a resident of Philadelphia.

SAMUEL F. MILLER.

He was born in Richmond, Ky., April 5, 1816, graduated at the University of Transylvania, and, after taking the degree of Doctor of Medicine, practiced the profession a few years, and then turned his attention to the law; having been from 1848 in favor of emancipation, and, though generally taking no part in politics, the course of public affairs caused him to remove from the State in 1850, when he settled in Iowa and became one of the leaders of the Republican party in that State; desiring no local or State offices, and declining many nominations, he attended wholly to his profession, and in 1862 was appointed by President Lincoln a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

NOAH SWAYNE.

This gentleman is still in fine health, though verging on sixty. He had a high professional character when he was appointed in 1862, and he has sustained it since he took his seat in this elevated court. Justice Swayne, like Justice Miller, is especially endeared to the progressive statesmen for his advanced views on jurisprudence, and the learning, brevity, and courage of his opinions. He is a great student, and outside of his profession prosecutes his researches into English literature with all the enthusiasm of a man of letters.

A Sharp Transaction.

Some days since, as a financier was just leaving his office in Wall street after a busy day of stock and banking operations (which had evidently been satisfactory, since his countenance wore that pleasant expression which is compatible only with unqualified success), he noticed a countryman, with slouched hat, homespun coat, and thick mud-covered boots, driving along a cow and a calf. The cow's udder was brimming full, so that fine streams of the lacteal fluid were running from her teats. The thought of pure country milk crowded the broker's brain, and the temptation to secure such a luxury induced him to pause.

"I say," cried he to the countryman.

"Hello, yerself," replied the rustic.

"That's a fine cow you have there."

"Waal, yes; pretty smart animal, I reckon."

"Where do you come from?"

"Dutchess county, a leetle back of Pokeepsy. Been drivin' all day round town; consarned tired any how."

"Is your cow for sale?"

"Don't know; hate to part with her, but mought dicker. Like to buy?"

"Perhaps so. What's your price?"

"Look here Mister you can't have the calf. That's half Devonshire and more'n a quarter Durham. I want her."

"Well, don't want the calf. What will you take for the cow?"

"What a thunderin' big house," soliloquised the countryman, as his glance rested on the Exchange. "Must a cost a heap of pewter!"

"Oh, if you won't sell, I'll go," observed the gentleman.

"Waal, I don't like to part with old Bet; but if you'll give sixty five dollars in Californy shiners, you can take her. Look at that," continued the Yankee, pointing to a little pool of milk that had gathered on the pavement, "that's true old Dutchess county grass juice, two thirds cream and the rest sweet buttermilk."

The financier thought the price was high, but the sight of the milk—and such a bag full—convinced him that the bargain would be a good one, so he stepped into his office and produced the gold, which the Yankee carefully counted, hefted, bit, &c., to make sure that it was good, observing that "folks are pesky sharp down here, and somebody said, this was Wall street, so I'd better look out." Having satisfied himself that the gold was good, he turned away with the calf, almost crying at parting with old Bet, who, he said, "he loved more'n he did his brother."

The Wall street gentleman hired a Hibernian to drive old Bet to his home, across the river. That night there was rejoicing in Brooklyn. Great was the flow of pure country milk, so abundant that the broker began to think that he had tapped the Milky Way. New pans were purchased, the children were filled up like demijohns, even the cats had a little extra, and Biddy called in all the helps around to talk over the new wonder. The proud owner and his wife congratulated each other a hundred times, and went to sleep only to dream of sailing in a huge tin pan over an ocean of milk. Old Bet was fed on corn meal, and bedded like a pet dog. Next morning, instead of fifteen quarts, she gave but three; next day about a pint, and in a week she was as dry as a book of logarithms.

The Wall street financier was completely sold. The Yankee never saw Dutchess county, but had got an old "farrow" cow, just drying up, borrowed a calf, set him to nursing until the flow was somewhat stimulated, then kept the cow without milking for a week, when she was in proper order to appear "on Change," when he dressed himself for the occasion, and made his debut in Wall street. The done-brown broker has since sold his cow to a butcher, for some twenty dollars, and taken the milk pans to his office to pitch pennies into.

BOGUS DIVORCEING.

In cities of such excessive magnitude as New York every type of rascality and villainy flourishes with a vigor surprising to those who have no familiarity with Gotham's doings. And among all the criminal objectionables, none have possessed such features of miserable treachery and cruel heartlessness as that of the divorce traffic—the trade in human hearts. For years it has pursued the undisturbed tenor of its way unheeded. No agents of the law have demanded an explanation of rights or wrongs, and its rascalities have gone on at such a pace that those whose hearts have been broken, their domestic circles enveloped in misery, and their affections outraged, have been unable to overtake and punish these dealers in the finer sensibilities of the human mind.

Divorce business is a tender offshot of the law, peculiarly susceptible of careful handling, and yet there has been enough of it going on here to supply the ordinary wants of seven moderately ambitious Chicagoes. The legimate type of the business has through the strangely liberal laws which govern society in New York, necessitated considerable business before Courts, and there was scarcely any need for the developement of a first class divorce swindle. Unscrupulous lawyers and their too guilty supporters have the credit of it, and until we look upon a few of them from outside the bars of a prison we shall continue to enjoy an ample supply of superior rascality of this particular sort.

The fair means which the code provides for the severance of marital relations have in too many cases proved inefficient to meet the mercenary demands of over guilty "bosom partners," and the low, unscrupulous limbs of the law to whom money is the god of all idolatry, lent their agency to complete a scheme of the most disgraceful and outrageous nature.

Obtaining a divorce with as little trouble as was characteristic of the initial experiments, was a matter not to be carelessly treated by domestic lords overburdened with affection or surcharged with outside love. Hence those who found their legal lore insufficient to make them shine as pettifogging pleaders even in minor causes, put up their shingles in new quarters, and become first class barterers in this much demanded commodity.

The patronage which they receive is, in its extent, somewhat beyond the comprehension of the general reader.

The way they do business is somewhat after this style:

The heartless wretch who has found home life distasteful to him through his outside gyrations with powdered and jeweled cupids with all the modern improvements, consults some successful villain in the legal walks of life. This successful villain has just enough knowledge of the statutes and code to keep himself within the bar, and just enough of necessity for nerve steadying to keep him constantly before one. The applicant for a non explosive divorce has a very private interview with his "legal adviser," and the retainer is given in a good round sum, which pays for everything. A very few facts are given as to the name, residence age, business, and other details concerning both parties—given, however or rather obtained, more for a clincher on the part of the legal acrobat than for any other purpose.

Papers are then drawn up with much haste, and, upon the guarantee that no publicity shall attend the affair, a good sum is paid down by the anxious fellow in search of freedom.

According to the sum paid will be the time consumed in securing the necessary papers.

The legal ghouls proceed before the courts with their hastily, prepared paper; make their application in any of the various forms at their command, and conform to all outward appearances with every requirement of the law. The advertisement is published duly, but an inquiry will reveal the fact that it is in some out of the way obscure sheet which not many persons beyond the publisher, the pressman and their families read. The notice thus gets into print, and after the expiration of the stipulated time, the "counsel for plaintiff" marches into court for his papers In all of the cases where this bogus style of divorcing goes on there is no appearance from the defendent, nor is there any answer to the complaint filed by plaintiff, unless perchance of the defendent—always well anticipated by the counsel—gives additional weight to the complaint, and ninety nine cases out of a hundred the Court grants the divorce and the limb of the law his way to his client with his patent emancipator safe and all right.

This is one style of settling up unpleasant domestic matters. The party who thus, with moderate expense and trouble, obtains alienation from his family circle, perhaps depart suddenly to some place which ever after hides him from those to whom his discovery is a matter of the deepest interest.

Bad news travels fast, and the result of court manipulations become, known soon enough. Misery and ruin follow. Hearts are broken, domestic circles broken—weeping and wailing, shame, disgrace, and wretchedness—and all through this free and liberal use of the courts and their powers for the basest purposes.

But when this dodge dose not suit the taste of the wayward ones who seek liberation from unpleasant ties, the out of town business comes in play. As in the above dodge, information is lodged with the legal ghoul of what is wanted, and he proceeds. He writes to a confederate in some distant city, and informs him in the most matter of fact way that Mr. So and so wants to be divorced from his wife; that there are not the slightest grounds upon which to base his application, but that he must have it because he has paid a good round sum for it. Confederate goes to work at once and procures a divorce without publicity, much in the same style that it is procured here. The object of changing the location is to provide against the possibility of the scheme being discovered and baffled. But when the paper has been secured and everything all right, secrecy is no longer necessary, so the truth of the matter comes out. Then the bad ends to which the engine of justice may be preverted are bared, but there is no redress.

In hundreds of cases of this kind, divorces are obtained without the knowledge of those who it is known would put a stop to the proceeding.

The many cases that have transpired of late, lead the people generally to the belief that something must be done to put an abrupt termination upon the villainous schemes.

Our courts have lately well ventilated the matter, and brought some members of the bar up in a light by no means enviable. With them the law will deal harshly, and it only remains for the authorities to hunt out other guilty parties and visit upon them the extreme penalty of violating a law which covers this offense.—N. Y. Democrat.

AN ARISTOCRATIC GHOST.

Louisville, it is now conceded, has a haunted house; that is to say, as much of a haunted house as can be expected in the present incredulous, poohpoohing condition of the public mind as to the appearances and disappearances of unseasonable visitors from the other world. We have now-a-days a scientific explanation for everything illusory, and shadowland itself might be explained away into substantial territory and annexed to our tremendous country, if some emphatic, must-be-so philosopher would but undertake the job. Looking at it from these premises, in the day-time, the haunted house we hear about as being located within the corporate limits of Louisville may yet be explained away and converted into rentable property.

This house, at which we arrive by a route so circuitous, is down town. We do not choose to give its particular location, for we have no designs on the property, and care nothing for the sneers of the incredulous who would insinuate that because the number and street are not mentioned, the house exists only in the brain of some over-worked reporter whose midnight oysters are yet in a state of non-digestive preservation. The house can certainly be seen, and if the ghost is as certain as the house, there can be no doubt of the truth of the stories told by house-wives and others in the neighborhood of the property.

It is alleged that there is certainly something wrong with the house, for perhaps no other building in the city, of its age, has had as many different tenants. The house is a two story structure, and every now and then the blinds will be thrown open, curtains will appear in the windows, and the smoke of a kitchen fire rolls out of a portly chimney. This is a sign that a tenant has been found. After the lapse of a day or two, the curtains come down, the blinds come together with a bang, the air above the chimney is clear, and a big wagon full of furniture moves solemnly away from the front. Then the tenant is gone. It may be that he has not advanced rent, or it may be half a dozen other things, but he comes and goes, and others come and go, and the house remains without a tenant.

One of the large rooms in the house is the subject of the neighborhood gossip, and strange, weird sights are said to have been seen in this room. Some time ago, a committee of twelve stout men, much more familiar with the yielding qualities of beef steak than with the conventionalities of spiritual society, were detailed to visit the house and occupy the haunted room until the ghost should appear. They went early one night, when a storm was howling through the city, and when in the gloom and the darkness each lonely street lamp seemed a grinning death's head or a leering jack o' lantern. These ghostly, flickering street lamps might well have been taken for the toplights of strolling corpses, come out of some of the old cemeteries for a tramp through deserted avenues and a peep at the struggling watchmen cowering for shelter along the route. The portly twelve, however, could see no such sights as these, for, as they pursued their way to the haunted house, they laughed and cracked jokes at the ghost's expense, and scarcely noticed what a dismal night was over them. At length, arriving at the house, they struck a light and made their way to the room said to be the resort of the ghostly visitor. More lights were produced, and the room began to look quite cheerful. The little company became convivial, and until nearly midnight they told good stories and made the building echo with applause and laughter. Then, all at once, the conversation ceased, as if every one had said all he had to say, and could not think of anything more to talk about. It was about time for the ghost to appear. The storm was howling louder than it had howled before that night, and it was almost time for the bells to be striking twelve.

They sat perfectly quiet for a few minutes, then one of them suddenly ejaculated, "There she comes!" As he spoke, there was a light rumbling sound like that of carriage wheels, and it was strangely clear and distinct above the noise of the storm. On the instant, the lights in the room sank down, and a light mist filled the apartment. Every object in it could be distinctly seen, however, as the lights were not totally extinguished, and the vapor itself did not tend to darken the room. The twelve strained their eyes, and some of them sat open-mouthed. As the vapor appeared, the sound of carriage wheels became louder, and in a moment, to the horror of the committee, a carriage itself, black as a hearse, came rolling into the middle of the room and stopped. No horses were visible, but as soon as the roll of the wheels had ceased, a figure resembling that of a lady, clad in white, suddenly appeared and was seen to step into the strange vehicle. Then the carriage wheeled off and was seen no more. The rattle of the wheels died away in echoes, and the lights in the room shot up again, the vapor disappearing with the apparition. Some of the twelve asserted that the carriage made several revolutions about the room, but the appearance and disappearence seemed to have taken place in an instant.

The committee remained to see nothing further, and, we believe, there have been no more similiar committees. Doubtless their story has been very much enlarged upon, but there can be no doubt that some very strange and probably very human hocus-pocus has been played in this house, and that the cause of the mystery has not been reached. The house is quite valuable, but no tenant has yet been found who would remain in it. Not long since laborers were digging post holes on the premises, upon some ground where a stable had formerly stood, and while at work they unearthed the remains of an infant. This was at once connected with the appearance of the apparition, but no clue was discovered by which the dead child could be identified, and it was quietly buried again. Thus the mystery remains unexplained, and the house is still unoccupied. —Louisville Courier and Journal.

IT is claimed that Fall River, Mass., is the largest cotton manufacturing town in the United States, its spindles being more than those of Lowell or Lawrence.

There are twenty-two mills within its limits, and the place can boast of 12,000 inhabitants, eight hundred looms and nearly six thousand spindles. This gives employment to 7,500 hands, whose wages approximate a quarter of a million of dollars monthly, and whose labor produces one hundred and twenty million yards of goods a year. It is said that the mills, although thrifty, and undoubtedly profitable, have been the subject of but little improvement for a number of years past, except in the character of the mechanism used. Some will be surprised to learn that this is for the most part imported. The managers of one establishment have recently ordered ten thousand spindles from English makers, and in spite of duty and cost of transportation, claim to find a profit in so doing.

New Advertisements.

SCHIFF & STEINFELD,

Have received this fall a heavy stock in

DRY GOODS,

TRIMMINGS,

NOTIONS,

FANCY GOODS. &C.,

Which they have purchased direct from the headquarters at

NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA,

And are therefore able to sell their goods now at prices which cannot be beat anywhere, Pittsburgh included.

They have received a full line of the celebrated

Double Warp Alpacca,

Considered the best make imported into this country.

IN

They have on hand now the latest in the

NEW YORK MARKET.

PRINTS,

They have on hand hundreds of different patterns of the best makes at 12½ cents; also inferior qualities at 8 and 10 cents.

WATERPROOF

Will be much worn again this fall, and on that account they laid in a large stock of all qualities.

IN

PLAIN AND CHECKERED FLANNELS

They have a larger assortment than any other establishment in the county.

They also offer extra bargains in bleached and unbleached

MUSLINS.

New Styles in

BLANKETS,

COVERLETS,

HOOP SKIRTS,

WOOLEN YARN

And all kinds of

NOTIONS

AND LADIES

Dress Trimmings.

IN

SUCH AS

BREASTPINS,

EARRINGS,

SLEEVE BUTTONS,

CHAINS, &C.,

They have received the most elegant styles, the like of which was never seen in this town.

If you see their stock in new styles in

MEN'S and BOYS' HATS,

and all kinds of

you must surely think they mean business.

In Fancy and Plain

CASSIMERES,

CLOTH,

DOESKINS,

BEAVERS,

CHINCHILLAS,

They say without bragging that no one in the county is able to show a more select stock of

and can offer them at

than they do. Therefore they can guarantee whoever patronizes them that they can furnish a suit of clothing which can not be beat, either in cut or prices.

They can say again that they have the best cutter in this county, a gentleman who goes ahead with the fashion, and has practiced his trade for twenty years in first class merchant tailoring establishments in New York, Cleveland, and lately at Alliance, O. Their force of tailors and tailoresses are all schooled hands, as will be seen by the work they intend to turn out this fall. To keep their old customers and get new ones this firm has concluded to make suits to order

CHEAPER THAN EVER.

All wool cassimere suits they will now make for $20

For which thirty dollars has to be paid elsewhere, and all wool black broadcloth suits for

$30

For which other houses charge $40. It would be advisable, and in fact it is to the interest of every one to price the goods and examine the stock of

SCHIFF & STEINFELD,

(Before purchasing elsewhere.)

FALLSTON FOUNDRY.

AND REPAIR SHOP.

Engines and machinery made and repaired in the best style. Having great variety of Patterns, I can with promptitude accommodate customers with almost everything in the casting line and at lowest rates.

Plough and Plough Castings, of different patterns, including the Great Western, which speaks for itself wherever it has been used.

STOVES,

Cooking, Franklin and Heating, of the most popular Patterns, of all Cooking Stoves the Great REPUBLIC is the best as it takes little fuel, one room to do the most work, best baker, and most durable; taken altogether the best stove in use. In connection with the stove I have got up a which takes very little room, no additional fuel, can not get out of order, and not liable to wear out, dispensing with all Pipe, can be put on or taken off at any time and made to suit all stoves of any size or patterns.
